SIX DOORS. FIVE KEYS. THREE CHANCES.

It's supposed to be a birthday sleepover. Then the bathroom mirror stops reflecting. Jr and Dakota come out in a long gray hallway with six doors and no way back. Five of them are video game worlds. Each holds a key to the last one. Three mistakes and the hallway keeps you.

Behind every door is a child who has been in there alone. Getting them home is the point — so underneath the adventure it's a book about going back for someone you don't know.

FOR YOUR COLLECTION

Reaches reluctant readers

Video game worlds, short chapters and a countdown — written for the eight-to-twelve readers who won't pick up anything else.

THE AUTHOR

Kateryn Cole writes middle-grade adventure from Louisiana. The Mirror began with a question her twelve-year-old son asked in front of two facing mirrors, and the two of them built the rest of it standing there. He's nineteen now and in the Marine Corps; his best friend is in the books as himself. Basic Training is her first book, with more coming.
